1. A round table meeting was held in Atyrau, attended by political scientists, economists, scientists, and journalists. The conversation was about the implementation of the instructions of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan, including those concerning the Atyrau region. "In his speech, the President highlighted many urgent problems of society, which caused the tragic events. He also announced steps to get out of the current situation. In his words, I saw a call to educate young people in the spirit of love for the Motherland. This is very important for the country. Our classics talked about it. And another important point. The President stressed that we will not stray from the path of reforms. Political reforms will take place in September. And this is also very important. Real parties from the people should come. Reforms are also needed in the country's Parliament. Cardinal changes in education are mandatory. The Head of State also correctly noted the need for the development of civil society. In addition, we need to get rid of corruption, fraternity, tribalism. All of them have led to people's distrust of the executive power," says Dr. of Historical Sciences Sayfolla Sapanov. His thought was continued by the chairman of the regional branch of the Farmers' Union of Kazakhstan Murat Sarmanov. "The words encouraging the people sounded from the mouth of the President. I support that the work on the construction of a new Kazakhstan should begin with socio-economic reforms. Over the past decades, the country has developed politically and economically. Yes, we were strong, gained credibility in the world, organized international forums, EXPO and other expensive image projects. We were proud of Kazakhstan, but it did not affect the life of the population in any way. Everything was beautiful at the EXPO, everything was shining, and ordinary people could not visit it, they do not have an elementary road... Therefore, people are waiting for real changes from the words of Kassym-Jomart Tokayev. The unrest began with an increase in gas prices in Zhanaozen, but it was picked up by residents of all Kazakhstan, because it was an emotional way out," Murat Sarmanov stated. On January 11, the President gave specific instructions, and the Government is currently developing new programs. "If there is no production, inflation will rise. Here I mean not only the agricultural sector. If we produced the goods ourselves, everything would be different. Dozens of reforms in agriculture have been carried out over 30 years. And the cart is still there. Many remained unfinished. Cattle are sold alive, there is no processing. We have a SEC that simply gives money to large companies that import products and sell them to the public, having a good profit. At the same time, we do not know at what price they purchased the goods from the manufacturer. Unfortunately, we "grow" only on paper, in reports. There is no real work. We need to develop production. Yes, a national plan for the development of the agricultural sector has been developed, but nothing works there. The state supports the peasants, but there have been no visible results. The path of help from the capital to, for example, Taisoygan, is long, and it simply does not reach. We also have an agricultural college with a hostel, it is well funded. But what do peasant farms get in the end? No more than 10 specialists actually go to work in agriculture. There are families where they sit on bread and tea without milk, the oligarchs do not represent the real situation in the country. Kassym-Jomart Tokayev's speech has specific tasks, and people, of course, hope for changes. Therefore, it is necessary to move from words to concrete deeds", - noted Marat Sarmanov. "The President has announced a fund for the people of Kazakhstan, which is good. But I believe that every wealthy person should invest in the development of the local population, as is practiced all over the world. On our research business, we go around the villages of the region. In one village, where 32 companies with foreign participation work, people seem to have remained in the past centuries. They drink water from the well, there are no roads, etc. This caused us a great shock. Why are the akims not seeking to improve life in the village, why are they sitting there? I think we need to conduct social research, travel, take pictures of how people really live. Our people are patient, I hope better times will come for them. I also support the opening of branches of world technical universities in Western Kazakhstan, but in no case should we turn away from the humanities. Because this is, first of all, the ideology, the correct education of Kazakhstanis," Saifolla Sapanov shared his thoughts. "Over the past 10 years, there have been several tenge devaluations. They were held to support exporters, but the economy did not develop. The economy should develop through the development of small and medium-sized businesses. But our business, due to the lack of real levers of support, was limited to launching restaurants and providing services. The engine of the economy is production and processing. Agriculture was also not developed. Joining the World Trade Organization requires the exclusion of government subsidies. The government should provide for all these points. According to statistics, the average salary of Kazakhstanis was 200 thousand tenge, but we know that in reality people work for a salary of 80-100 thousand tenge. All this led to people taking to the streets. The time has come when the economy should turn to the people. Social inequality is the root of all the problems of the state," said Associate Professor, Head of the Department of Economics at the local university, Mayra Dariskalieva. "First of all, it is necessary to eradicate the shadow economy so that there is no existing huge gap between the strata of the population. Officially, the unemployment rate is 4.9 percent, but in fact it is much higher. Especially among young people. Also, for the development of the economy, it is necessary to limit imports and start training specialists for the agricultural sector. That is, to develop the agricultural potential of the country," Rysty Sabirova, senior lecturer of the Department of Finance and Accounting, Candidate of Economics of the local university, expressed her suggestions.
